HONOR TO THE INFANTA
Eulalie's Arrival the One Topic at Washington.

AMERICAN LUXURIES A SURPRISE.

Greeted at the Capital by Great Crowds of People—The Royal Party Stepped From the Cars to a Carpeted Platform. Received by Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland.

NEW YORK, May 20.—Infanta Eulalie was the recipient of distinguished honors upon her arrival in port here, and in due time arrived at Jersey City on the Spanish warship Infanta Isabella, escorted by the United States cruiser Dolphin.

Before the train started on the trip to Washington a crowd of several hundred people had gathered about the private car Wildwood, which was set apart for the exclusive use of the young princess and her immediate suite. As she alighted from her carriage and faced the crowd she betrayed the first sign of timidity, and for a second clung to the arm of her escort, Commander Davis. So far as her habit was concerned she might have passed for a typical young American matron.

Just a murmur of approbation by the crowd swelled into a genuine American cheer as the infanta stepped lightly upon the rear platform of the Wildwood and gave a bright smile and bow of acknowledgment. As the train rolled away the visitors turned their attention to its appointments. The luxury of modern American railroad travel was all unknown to them, and they were not backward in admitting the pleasure and novelty of the trip. Added to the comfort of the interior arrangements was the beauty of the landscape along the banks of the Delaware and the Susquehanna, and the many pretty suburban homes nestling in a wealth of fresh green foliage on an ideal spring day, so that the princess, finally remarked with a sigh of pleasure that she wondered whether Europe did not look small and unprofitable to the people who lived in this great country. An elaborate course dinner was served on the train after leaving Baltimore, and so the time consumed in the run to Washington passed quickly and pleasantly.

Royally Welcomed at Washington.
 WASHINGTON, May 20.—The royal train arrived here at 8:40 p. m. An immense crowd of people gathered in the vicinity of the Pennsylvania railroad station, more than an hour before the train arrived. The attaches of the Spanish legation were there as early as 7 o'clock.

There was a stir among the rapidly gathering throng and a faint cheer as four troops of the United States cavalry under Colonel Henry from Fort Myer, across the Potomac in Virginia, rode up and formed in a long line. They wore fatigue uniforms.

Secretary Gresham and Assistant Secretary Quincy came shortly after the arrival of the cavalry, in Mr. Gresham's carriage, followed almost immediately by a handsome barouche drawn by four magnificent bay horses. It was President Cleveland's carriage, and the president's coachman, with a brand new footman, were on the box.

Other officials began to arrive. Colonel John M. Wilson of the army and the commissioner of public buildings and grounds, wore full dress uniform in his capacity as the military representative of the president. Assistant Secretary Adee and Chief Clerk Rockhill of the state department were also in attendance.

Stretching Carpet in a Depot.
 A number of railroad porters caused a flutter in the crowd by laying a double width of carpet along the east side of the platform. This was for the passage of the royal party from the train to the carriage. Then a detachment of policemen, under a lieutenant, marched into the station and drove back all outsiders who had secured entrance.

After two or three false alarms the train steamed into the station exactly on time. Secretary Gresham, the state department officials and the party from the Spanish legation walked nearer to the tracks as the train came to a standstill.

The princess was the first to alight. She was assisted from the train by Commander Davis. The princess and Secretary Gresham greeted each other pleasantly, and then other members of the receiving party gathered about them. The greeters, Secretary Gresham offered his arm to the princess, and they walked down the carpeted platform to the carriage entrance of the station, followed by the royal suite. Outside the crowd was something enormous.

The infanta, Secretary Gresham, Minister Muruaga and Prince Antonio entered the president's carriage, the cavalrymen saluted, and the procession began to move up Pennsylvania avenue toward the Arlington. Four buglers on horseback led, and with the four troops of cavalry, one of which was composed of colored soldiers from the "Fighting Ninth," formed the escort for the royal party. Six sergeants of cavalry acted as bodyguard to the princess, and following her carriage came the carriages containing her suite and the members of the receiving party.

The Avenue Packed With People.

Pennsylvania avenue was packed with people on either side from the Sixth street station to the treasury department and to the Arlington hotel. The ride up the avenue was devoid of any special incident. Occasionally in response to salutations from the crowd Secretary Gresham lifted his hat and the princess graciously bowed. It was 8:45 when the head of the column of troops turned off of Pennsylvania avenue and came to the hotel. The cavalry moved quickly up the broad avenue and wheeled into line, coming to a dress parade. Immediately behind came the president's four-in-hand. The princess alighted upon the arm of Secretary Gresham, and, followed by her husband, the prince and the Spanish minister, entered the summer annex. The streets were thronged with people, and a loud cheer went up as the princess stepped to the pavement.

Immediately upon entering the house, the princess passed into the reception room, accompanied by Secretary Gresham and Assistant Secretaries Adee and Quincy and her suite. A moment later and the representatives of the government retired and Commander Davis bade the party good night.

Although expressing herself as not at all fatigued, the princess soon retired to her own rooms to secure a good night's rest preparatory to the festivities that await her. In the morning she paid her respects to President and Mrs. Cleveland.

SECRETARY SMITH DARED.

Angry Georgians Suggest That He Resign and Oppose Livingston.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 20.—The majority of Democrats in the State who have been satisfied with the old regime are up in arms against Secretary Hoke Smith. That gentleman has ever since his appointment interfered in the distribution of patronage in all portions of the State to satisfy old personal grudges. It is claimed, to such an extent that all Democrats are aroused, except the personal following of Secretary Smith and Senator Gordon. The indignation is not confined to any one faction, but is general. Prior to his appointment Mr. Smith did not figure very prominently in politics, and the Democrats say he never will in the future.

The papers have taken the matter up to-day and charge him with making a cowardly, underhand fight against Congressman Livingston in his now famous Congress postoffice matter. The papers claim that Secretary Smith and Senator Gordon long ago made a boast that Congressman Livingston would not be allowed any patronage at all. That they made the fight, the papers allege, to defeat him even in his selection for a postmaster.

As a result of the widespread bitterness over the Secretary's doings the Atlanta Herald made an attack upon him yesterday. The Herald is a Democratic paper, a free lance, and is edited and owned by a near relative of Governor Northern. It published a double headed editorial to-night condemning Secretary Smith, and facetiously suggesting that if he had any courage he owes it to Mr. Livingston to resign and fight the matter in the Fifth district. The suggestion has caused much mirth among anti Smith men, as they claim he could not be elected coroner anywhere in the State.

The indignation is growing rapidly, and is spreading to all parts of the State.

THE CANVASSING COMMITTEE
Actively at Work For the New Cotton Mill.

The People of Roanoke Only Asked to Contribute Twenty Per Cent. of the Cost of the Factory—Foolish Objections Philosophically Met by the Committee—The Location a Good One.

The subscription committees, recently appointed by the directors of the Roanoke cotton mill to canvass the town for subscriptions to the capital stock of the company, have been laboriously at work ever since their appointment and have met with some success, but they have not received the encouragement that is due the enterprise.

The committees expect that owing to the stringency in the money market and to the "hard times" that is universal at this time throughout the country that subscriptions could not be had as readily as under some circumstances, but one plea has been entered as an excuse that was unlooked for and is entirely unmerited. Business men in the city have urged as an objection to taking capital stock that because of the location of the mill in the western suburbs that the enterprise will not be of as much benefit to the citizens as if the plant were located nearer to the business center of the town.

The fallacy of this objection is obvious if anyone will take the trouble to investigate the matter. Only one other site was offered to the committee that could be called suitable, and that on the property of the Buena Vista Land Company is really, taking into consideration the arrangements of the street car system, further from the center of town than the one in the West End. The committee is largely composed of men who propose to put in the greater part of the money to start the enterprise, and they had not been on the site five minutes before the selection was made. The people of Roanoke are on'y asked to contribute 20 per cent. of the cost of the manufacturing, and the parties who subscribe the 80 per cent naturally should be allowed to place the plant at the point they think the most suitable.

But as a matter of fact the cotton mill, established in the western suburb of the city, will be of the same advantage to the city as if it could be located in the heart of the city, for it is very well known that the employees of the manufacturing already stationed there buy everything they use directly from the merchants in town, and in all parts of the city. For example, Vinton is three miles from the Union depot and two-thirds of its population of 1,500 derive their living from the money earned at labor in the various enterprises in this city. It is also a fact that many of the employees of the Duval Engine Works and of the Norwick Lock Works live at Vint n, a distance of five miles, and go to and from work every night and morning on the street railway.

A number of the employees in these places also reside at Crystal Spring and in Northeast Roanoke. The Street Railway Company is already pledged to extend their lines to the very door of the new cotton mill and will reduce the rates to employees to eight cents for a round trip, so that as a matter of course the employees will reside in all different sections of the city. More than this, it is well known that even as far as Salem, the enterprises there benefit the people of Roanoke as much or more than they do the town in which they are located, for the simple reason a great number of the people of Salem purchase the means of sustenance of life in this city. The amount of the Salem pay rolls can be as distinctly felt here as can be the amount of the pay roll of the Roanoke Machine Works.

This is the greatest enterprise that has been offered to the people of this city since the establishment of the Roanoke Machine Works, and taking into consideration that the citizens are only asked to subscribe $50,000 of the $250,000 required to build the factory, it will be a sad blow to the progress, enterprise and prosperity of the Magic City if this offer is not immediately taken advantage of. But this is not a contribution for charitable purposes. It has been demonstrated that every similar enterprise in the South has been prosperous without an exception and as a matter of business any man who can take shares of capital stock will find that he has not only materially contributed to the success and prosperity of the city, but has made an investment that will personally bring him in larger and better returns than any other legitimate scheme he can put his money into.

STILL SHROUDED IN MYSTERY.
 Rebekah Clements Determined Not to Return to Her Home.

The deep mystery which hangs around the elopement of Rebekah Clements from her home near Lynchburg to come to this city and engage in menial service, and who was found here by her father Friday evening, grows deeper and with all the possible light thrown on the subject is still impenetrable and may forever remain one of the unsolved mysterious problems that will be buried a secret in the graves of the principal actors.

Friday night the unhappy maiden rested quietly at the Home for the Sick and awoke yesterday perfectly rational and says she does not remember a single thing from Friday afternoon until she awoke and she vows she did not take any opiates. This statement is borne out by the physicians who examined her and who say she only had a severe attack of hysteria.

She refused to see her father yesterday morning and during the forenoon went to the home of her aunt, Mrs. Rosa V. Critzer, who lives at Crystal Spring, where she still is. Robert Clements, the father, is still in the city and will probably go to Lynchburg to-day, and go alone.

A TIMES reporter called on Miss Clements at the home of her aunt last evening and found her perfectly recovered from the attack of hysteria, cool and self possessed. She was asked to make a statement of the affair in order to place herself in a true light.

She said she could never tell the true reason why she left home, that she would die unrepentant a thousand times over, before a living human being should ever know what drove her to run away. Her father knew, and she was surprised and shocked that he could follow her here and attempt to carry her away. She thought that he would rather die himself than to let any of the affair be made public. One thing though she would say and that was the married man her father spoke of, as well as the young widow, had nothing whatever to do with her coming here.

The girl's aunt, Mrs. Critzer, said she was convinced that everything the young lady said was true, although she did not know the particulars.

THE GUBERNATORIAL FIGHT.
 The Friends of the Different Candidates Organizing Clubs.

Pursuant to a call made yesterday morning a meeting was held last night in Old Fellows' hall, in the Smith Music building, for the purpose of forming an O'Ferrall club. S. Hamilton Graves called the meeting to order and was, on motion, elected unanimously as temporary chairman, and W. E. Thomas was elected secretary.

A committee on permanent organization was appointed consisting of Messrs. Dupuy, Miller, Hardaway, Parish and Rowan. While the committee was consulting speeches were made by Judge Gooch, Caplan, Crane, Dr. Sims and A. H. Herring. The report of the committee, which was adopted as a whole, was that the club be called the O'Ferrall Democratic Club of Roanoke. The club then elected permanent officers as follows: President, W. O. Hardaway; vice presidents (one from each ward), J. J. Gary, S. Hamilton Graves, A. W. Lester, Hugh Wiley, R. E. Russell; secretary, W. E. Thomas; treasurer, T. R. Tillett; executive committee (one from each ward), T. W. Miller, S. Hamilton Graves, P. W. Greely, Owen Duggan, J. W. Crumpecker.

After speeches by T. W. Miller and A. P. Staples the secretary announced that seventy-six voters had come forward and enrolled their names as members. After appointing a committee to secure the old Opera House for a meeting next Wednesday night the club adjourned.

The friends of Lieutenant Governor J. Hoge Tyler will hold a meeting next Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock in the hall of the J. O. U. A. M. on Campbell street, for the purpose of organizing a Tyler club.

A Fatal Shooting Affair.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 20.—There was a fatal shooting affair at Gauley Bridge, near here, last evening between Capt. Wm. Shepperd, a railroad contractor, and P. Mitchell, a whiskey dealer. The men had trouble before and when they met last evening Mitchell fatally shot Shepperd in the stomach and Shepperd shot Mitchell to death, two bullets passing through his body. All parties are well connected and much excitement has grown out of the affair.

SCORCHING THE SALOONS.
Sam Jones Fighting Whiskey in Kentucky.

He Jumps on Owensboro's Barrooms, Hot Oratorical Shot For the Distillers of Old Bourbon—He Compares Them With Rube Burrows to Their Great Disadvantage—Large Crowds Attend His Meetings.

Special Correspondence of the Atlanta Journal.

OWENSBORO, Ky., May 17.—We closed the meeting in Paducah last Monday night. It was truly a wonderful work of grace. I believe that no less than 2,000 people came upon the side of God and right in that meeting.

The building was 200 feet square, I was told, and seated comfortably perhaps 8,000 people. The crowds were immense, and the city was stirred and moved from center to circumference. I saw 450 people give their hands to the different pastors at one service to join the churches of the city. God only knows the length and depth and height of a movement like that. I do not believe that the city will get over a movement like that in a hundred years. It will never be the same city it once was.

THE WORK AT OWENSBORO.

At the close of the meeting at Paducah, Brothers Stuart and Excell came on to Owensboro and began the meeting here. I ran down home on Tuesday to see the sick one of our home. I came back and joined in the movement here on Thursday afternoon. The citizens of the town have built a commodious and elegant tabernacle, seating, perhaps, 6,500 people. The crowds are immense and interest deepening with every service. Last night I shelled the woods.

A WHISKY DOMINATED CITY.

This city is the Peoria of the South, a city of distilleries, a whiskey-dominated city, so said.

Last night the tabernacle was full. I preached on the text, "Owe No Man Anything." The sparks would fly occasionally, and the fur flew constantly. I quote from the Messenger's report of the sermon this morning:

ON A LEVEL WITH THE DEVIL.

"An innocent man is on a level with God, and a sinner is on a level with the devil. There is no hell that I could wish a man so bad as the terror of his own guilty conscience. I would rather be in the penitentiary, wearing stripes, knowing I was innocent of the crime for which I was convicted, than to be some of you people I see walking the streets of Owensboro in your pride, when you know you ought to be in the penitentiary, and would be if the law was enforced against you. I would not carry around the guilty conscience of one of you for all of Kentucky, you miserable, guilty dogs, you."

FULL ALL THE TIME.

"I have been talking an hour, but I am not through. If any of you want to go, get out. Some of you are full now, and some of you were full when you came here, and I don't wonder at your being full. I wonder more that you are not all full all the time, with all the whiskey that you make here. Think of the trouble that one distiller can cause when he is an old distiller. If a man could stand on top of his distillery and see where his whiskey goes, and the suffering and misery and degradation it causes, he would jump down from there and run like all the devils in hell, were after him, horns, hoofs and tails. You old distiller, you may be the richest man in town and live in the finest house, but your feet won't be cold until your soul will be writhing in hell, with the added agony of the thousands of the damned whom you have sent there."

"FOURTEEN TO MAKE A GOOD HOG."

"How many saloons have you? Sixty. They pay $200 each per year to the city. That makes $12,000. There are 13,000 people in Owensboro. That is a dollar a head. A 200 pound hog will bring $14, so it would take fourteen of you to make a good hog. If you don't ashamed of yourselves after this, if you don't feel like hogs, you don't feel natural."

An old distiller can make five gallons of whisky out of one bushel of corn. He sells it and ships it out of town on its mission of desolation, carrying ruin to thousands of hearts and homes, and damning the souls of otherwise noble men. There is money in the business. Of course there is; there is money in robbing trains. Rube Burrows would get on a train and make everybody hold up their hands and get their money. He didn't take their health, their happiness, their reputation and their immortal souls—only their money. Now, which is the nicest of the two? I want you preachers to say, speak out now. (About a dozen ministers said "train robbing.") You old bloated distillers, do you hear that? You reporters put that down just as I say it, I want them to get it.

THE BULL NECKED BARKEEPERS.

"You bull-necked saloon keepers are catspaws for the distillers. You are dirty, little benchmen for the bloated distillers. But I want you to know that it is not you I am fighting, but your business. It is a low down business. I can prove it by those old brothers who go in the places. Now, brothers, when you go in to get a drink don't you strike a low-down crowd? I am taking you for a sample, now. Ain't I right? And you say it is nobody's business if you drink. You're a liar, you dirty, red nosed devil, if you say it's nobody's business to see that nobody gets drunk. It is everybody's business to see that nobody drinks, and it will be proved to all right here in this town before many days."

"Every man connected with the whiskey business in this town ought to die drunk, and if he has any sons they
